Dear Dr. Burleigh,

Greetings from the Livingstons, and I have not forgotten you; as you will see, and again you are one of the fortunate ones, with doing a consistant search of each reel, surprizes come to the surface; as yours did, how lucky can some people be.

I shall send you some that I have found, and have ordered the xeroxing of some expecially your JAMES, when the Government sends it to me, have patience please, that is what I have had to learn in this field; also feel that I have more info on the name in my unfilled file of about two inches or more. I do it all out on 3 ringed paper, then take a spurt and FILE, need a secretary, but they are scarce.

Ed has had another operation (major) since we last seen you, feel that it is taking more out of me than him. That is the 11th one, the Penthol is taking its tole on his memory, it is sure frustrating. I do not know what can go wrong next. Feel something has to change. However, I am trying to get caught up with much of this mail that is dangling with all the dis-

Just a note to say I applied for membership in the V.C.G.S. five months ago & have had no reply from the secretary. Is any reorganization planned in the new year.?

Hope to visit Ireland in quest of genealogical information this summer.
I am wondering if I could be of service to anyone in the society with Irish antecedents.?

With best regards I hope to hear from you, soon.

Dr. H.C. Burleigh
33 Ontario Street, Apt. 507
KINGSTON, Ontario

Dear Dr. Burleigh:

In reply to your letter of 25 February, I wish to inform you that the only early parish records we have for the State of Louisiana are those of St-François-Xavier, dit Poste de Vincennes in Ouabache. These consist of births, marriages and deaths for the period from 1749 to 1786. Should you wish to consult these records, they are contained on microfilm reel C-2896 which may be borrowed for your use by any institution possessing a microfilm reader and participating in the interlibrary loan arrangement. Requests for loans must be submitted by the borrowing institution on authorized forms and should clearly identify the source and reel numbers required.

Unfortunately, a search of various indexes and logical sources failed to locate any reference to the marriage of James Costello and Katherine Ryan or to their children. You might find it interesting to know that in the course of our search, we consulted a reference file on the Costello family and found the inquiry you addressed to the Archives on 26 August 1935.

You might be able to obtain some assistance from the provincial archives, as I understand that institution has custody of thousands of indexed marriages. The address follows for your convenience.

Archives Nationales du Québec,

Québec, P. Q. G1K 3A3

Recently I addressed a question to the Public Archives of Canada.
They could not supply me with an answer, and recommended that I appeal to you.

What is the question?

Two young Irish men, James O'Connell, born in 1743, and his wife Mary, born in 1745, were married in the Province of Quebec about 1770. Three children were born to them, namely:

1. Mary, born about 1771.
2. Catherine, born about 1773.
3. James, born in 1777, and baptized in the Cathedral of Quebec City the following. I have a copy of this copy.

During the siege of Québec by the Americans in 1775-6, James served in some unit, while his wife and children were supposed to have stayed in the city.
James subsequently, in 1776, served with the army in defence of Canada by the Americans. I have a suspicion that both James and his wife were children of Irish soldiers who served with the British army under General Wolfe.

If you can supply me with any information regarding these people,
I shall be pleased to pay for service.

Thank you for your kindness in trying to help me

Travally yours

Costello. Among the many A-Norm. settlers in Ireland, Temp. Henry II, was Hostilis de Angulo. His descendants were called Mac-Ostello (son of Hostilis) which by still further corruption became Costello.

Ball. a nickname of Baldwin. A West of England provincialism for bald.

Burleigh. Burley (often interchangeably used.) Places in Cos. Northampt., Rutland, Hants, York &c

Eavestaff. Most likely a corruption of Heave-staff, analogous to Hurlbat, Shakeshaft, Wagstaff, and Shakespear

Howard. This noble historical name has been a sore puzzle to etymologists. See Eng. Surv. I. 133. A writer in the Quarterly Rev. vol. CII says, the family "may be Saxon, may be Danish." They are more probably of Norwegian origin. Havard or Haavard was a common personal name among the Northmen. "It appears," says Laing, "to be the English name Howard, and left by them in Northumberland and East Anglia." Heimskringla. vol. I. p. 410. The seventeenth-century genealogists laboured hard to prove a Norman origin for this illustrious race, but authentic records extend back no farther than the XIII. cent., when the Howards rose into eminence in Norfolk; (see Peerage) though. Howardus, the Essex under-tenant of Domesday may be cited on that side.

How. Howe. Howes. In the South, a small round hill; in the North, a hollow place or plain. The mediæval form is at How, generally synonymous with Hill. A.-Sax. hwa - a mountain.

Mariott. Marietus seems to have been a personal name. In Domesd. one Alricus Marieti sune - Alric. the son of Mariet - occurs as an under-tenant in many counties. See Ellis, Introd. ii. 10. De Geville thinks it is a derivative of Mary. Eng. Surv. ii. 83. There is, however, a parish in Somerset called Merriott. See Merriott.

Marriott. A family tradition derives it from a town of the same name in Normandy; but no place in that province approaching the sound or orthography is to be found. The name is, however, unquestionably French, and probably one of the many derivatives of the female name Mary. Mariette and Mariotte are still found as surnames in Normandy. See De Geville, in Mem. Soc. Ant. Norm. for 1844

Millington. A parish in Yorkshire, and a township in Cheshire.

Mittle. The O. German chneitili is referred by Förstemann to the O. Germ. Knecht, Knight or child.

O'Regan. This family were lords of Idroone, co. Carlow. The name was not infrequently written O'Mulryan. O'Regan, Prince of Idroone, was slain in 1170, by Raymond le Gros, the avant-courier of Strongbow. O'Alton.

Percy. William de Percy, who, with his brother Serlo, assisted in the Conquest of England, appears in Domesday as tenant in capite in many counties, especially in those of York and Lincoln Percy is the name of a parish and canton near St. Lo, in Normandy, the ancient fief of the family. Dugdale traces the pedigree of William de Percy up to the Northman Mainfred, who settled in Meustria (Normandy) before the cession of that province to Rollo.

A popular tradition accounts otherwise for the origin of this illustrious historical surname. It asserts that Malcolm, King of Scotland, having besieged the castle of Alnwick, demanded seisin of that fortress by the surrender of the keys. The Governor of the castle so managed matters, that, in delivering the keys at the end of a lance, he pierced the monarch's eye and caused his death. Hence he acquired the surname of "Pierce-Eye," which, by the omission of several useless vowels, ultimately became Percy! See Bruce's Brevary Tapestry, p. 64

Perry. 1. A narrowed pronunciation of Parry, ap-Harry. 2. Amongst the tenants in capite in co. Hants, at the making of Domesday, was one "Peret prestarius." Perry. H.R.

Powell. ap-Howel — the son of Howel, a personal name common in Wales. The Powells of Nant Eos, co. Cardigan, are descended from Philip ap Howell, whose pedigree is traced to Edwin ap Grono, Lord of Tegauingl, founder of the XIII. noble tribe of North Wales-Powrys. The Powells of Brandlesome, co. Lancaster, spring from Walter Powell of Bucknell in Shropshire, temp. Elizabeth, who was of the posterity of Rhys ap Iudor, King of South Wales. B. L. G. There are many other families of undoubted antiquity, derived from the best ancestry of the principality, though the name of Powell is, in all cases, of comparatively late adoption

The Story of the Irish Race.

"If the speech is Irish the heart is also Irish," as an English official bitterly declared. So long as the Irish retained their native culture and language, their power of assimilating what was best in other resident races was marvellous. The Sean Shells (old foreigners) became "more Irish than the Irish themselves" they donned the Irish national dress, used the Irish tongue, fostered Irish literature and music, ruled their subjects by the Brehon laws, and because they thus became essentially Irish they won the devotion and fidelity of the people. They even discarded their own Norman names in favour of Irish names. Sir John Davies, in the reign of James I of England, deplored their conduct: "As they did not only forget the English language and scorned the use thereof, but grew to be ashamed of their very English names, though they were noble and of great antiquity, and took Irish surnames and nicknames." The De Burghs were transformed, first into Burkes, then into MacWilliams. The De Berminghams became MacGories; the Devecesters, MacJordans; the De Angulo family was henceforth known as MacCostello. "In Munster, of the great families of the Geraldines planted there, one was called MacMorice, chief of the house of Desmond; and another MacSibbon, who was also called the White Knight." ... "And they did this in contempt and hatred of the English name and nation whereof these degenerate families became more mortal enemies" to England than the Gaels.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

GEORGE M. SMITH

Word has been received here of the death in Sawtelle Hospital, Los Angeles, Cal., on Tuesday of George R. Smith, formerly of this city. Deceased was the son of the late Robert W. and Mrs. Smith, 191 Brock street. He is survived by his mother and two sisters, Mrs. Hilton and Mrs. Cecil Phillips of Kingston and three brothers, R. M. Smith and F. T. Smith of Toronto and W. W. Smith of Kingston.

JOSEPH LOTT PERCY

The death occurred at Verona on Thursday of Joseph Lott Percy, aged ninety-six years. Deceased was the oldest resident of the community and was known and much respected throughout the entire countryside. The funeral is being held from his late residence on Saturday afternoon to the United Church where funeral service will be held.
